Alan Bruns, Kellogg Social Studies Teacher, Honored by the Museum of History and Industry as The Outstanding History Educator of the Year. Alan has been teaching Shoreline student's social studies at an engaging level for ten years, he is a dynamo in the classroom as well as a leader among his peers. Alan's classroom is alive with learning. Students are active participants in lessons that require high-level thinking and active research. Alan challenges his students' thinking by using global topics and bringing in high-level guest speakers to provide a real-life perspective to their studies. Congratulations Alan!

7th grade students will have the opportunity to participate in a survey regarding bullying developed by a research student at the University of Washington, Jodi Newman. The survey is voluntary and requires parental consent. Students will bring home parent consent forms this week, so please look for them. Students will also be given the choice of whether or not they wish to participate. All student responses will be kept confidential. The results of the survey will be shared with staff as we evaluate interventions in bullying situations. If you have any concerns, please contact Lori Longo, Principal, at (206) 368- 4783. If you have any questions about the survey or your child's participation in this study, please contact Jodi Newman at (425) 417-3609.

Shoreline Foundation Phonathon is October 26th. The Shoreline Foundation supports Kellogg in many ways. This year our building goals grant of $1818.00 will support Reading Intervention, Study Island Math Support, Mentor for Kellogg Students and Technology training for staff to support the continued enhancement of instruction and academic learning through the integration of technology and the use of SMART Boards in the core classrooms at Kellogg.
